Addison Will Entertain Dairy Convention Monday and Tuesday

Fifth annual gathering of Steuben dairymen will be held in high school building January 24-25 — Sessions begin at 10:30 A. M.—Seniors will serve dinner—Nationally known speakers, entertainment and instruction planned for winter program.

An interesting and varied program of speakers will mark the occasion of the fifth annual Steuben Co. Dairy Convention to be held in Addison High School January 24 and 25. This event, arranged by the farm bureau committee, marks the highlight of the winter dairy program.

One of the feature speakers of the two-day event is L. A. Dalton, General Dairy Agent DL&W R. R., Chicago, Ill., who will discuss recent developments of the dairy industry in the mid-west. Mr. Dalton was for many years connected with the dairy industry in New York State before accepting his present position. With a knowledge of both regions well in mind, he will have a story that should be of interest to Steuben dairymen; namely, will dairying outside New York City Milk Shed directly affect producers here?

Dr. H. A. Brueckner, College of Agriculture, will review sanitary regulations as they apply to public health and also in regard to cost to the farmer. N. S. Wetmiller, popular member of the Cohocton firm, will discuss these regulations as they affect milk marketing.

New phases of milk marketing and the outlook for dairying in 1938 will be presented by L. C. Cunningham of the College of Agriculture. Pasture improvement in Steuben County is the subject assigned to Prof. Johnstone Wallace, English pasture expert who will also show pictures taken in Europe this past summer.

One session will feature a discussion of healthy herds which will include Mastitis led by Dr. J. H. Hewitt, Cortland, and 'Calfhood Vaccinations' by Dr. Birch, who has had twenty years experience in studying Bangs' disease.

H. B. Blough, Niagara Falls,

Feature Speaker

manager of Kincaid Brown Swiss Farm, will tell a story of how they have managed to breed high producing championship cattle. Mr. Blough has figured prominently in this successful enterprise.

The meetings will begin promptly at 10:30 each day and the program will be concluded at 3 P. M. Dinner will be arranged by Seniors' Mother Club and served by Addison High School seniors. The alarm of fire was spread about the village early Wednesday morning when the Baptist parsonage was thought to be on fire. Smoke was seen escaping from underneath the roof and the upper floor of the house was filled with smoke. The situation was alarming until the chimney was found to be completely filled. An opening was made from the top of the chimney allowing the smoke and fire to escape. No damage was done except by smoke. Many responded to the call.

Greenwood Man Meets Death On Woodhull-Jasper Highway

Donald Harkenrider fatally hurt when car crashes into pole near Wayne Loper farm—Dies on reaching doctor's office—Was returning from work on highway Wednesday afternoon.

Daniel Harkenrider of Greenwood was fatally injured yesterday when his Ford coupe crashed into an electric pole on the Woodhull-Jasper road. Harkenrider was accompanied by Everett Osmon, also of Greenwood who received medical attention. A splinter of the pole pierced Harkenrider's mouth and throat and he suffered other injuries of the chest and head. He was taken to the office of Dr. Fayette MacDonald in Woodhull, but died shortly after arriving there.

The accident occurred near the Wayne Loper farm as Harkenrider was driving home from work on a county road. The car swerved from the road near the bridge, crashing into the pole which broke off about 12 feet above the ground. The machine was wrapped around the pole, the impact swinging it around with the rear wheels on the edge of the highway and the front end of the car down the bank. It was badly wrecked.

The accident came at about six o'clock, being witnessed by James Brabant and Ovilla Guiendon of Jasper who summoned help. By an odd quirk of fate a cousin of the victim also was killed in an auto accident a few years ago near the Towsley farm, not far from Wednesday's tragedy.

Mr. Harkenrider was 27 years of age. He leaves a bride of two months, Mary Burlingame Harkenrider; also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Harkenrider. A brother, Francis, two sisters; Mrs. Anna McCormick and Mrs. Theresa Congdon. The body was removed to the Killeen undertaking parlors in Hornell. Cold Spell Sends Thermometer to 20 Below Zero

The coldest spell of the year brought misery, suffering and unhappiness to many, and like many unpleasant things, brought pleasantness to many, especially the plumber, the coal man and to the kids who want to skate. Garage men also made a fair haul on the cold spell from stalled cars.

Addison and vicinity's coldest spell this season struck the county Monday night, continuing through Tuesday and into Wednesday afternoon, when the thermometer raced from 17 below at 8 o'clock to 22 above at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

There were fewer cars on the street Wednesday than any business day during the year for few drivers wanted to have a frozen radiator from a car that had been standing still in the cold.

The skating rink in the rear of the school house was cleared of snow Monday, flooded Tuesday and Wednesday and a hard, glassy surface was ready for the hardy skaters who braved the weather to skate.

The cold snap also aided ice men of the vicinity for the water froze deep on the river and on Goodhue Lake, where they are drawing ice.

Addison Credit Association Charter Will Close Monday Night

Addison merchants, professional and business men are invited to participate in cooperative group for their mutual protection in giving credit — Fifteen form preliminary organization — Charter adoption and election of officers in M. G. Hubbs Store Monday.

Fifteen Addison merchants have banded together to form the Addison Merchants' Credit Association for the protection of credit accounts, for the collection of old accounts and to prevent "chiselers" from securing credit when they are not entitled to it.

The organization will take final form Monday night at a meeting in the M. G. Hubbs store. Any merchants wishing to become a charter member may attend Monday night at 7:30 and enroll for a fee of three dollars. After Monday the entrance fee will be $10.

The fee is to enable the organization to prepare lists of every person who has had credit in the cooperating establishments. The credit accounts will then be rated on the basis of whether they were poor or good pay or whether nothing was ever paid on the account. In addition there will be a system of marking to enable other merchants to know how many merchants a person owes and an approximate sum. No figures will be given.

No Compulsion

There is no compulsion when the information is received, that the merchant must deny credit, that is up to him. The information is given him confidentially, and must be kept confidential. Breaking faith with the organization means relinquishment of membership, for this being a cooperative proposition it is thought the members will cooperate for their own protection.

Officers will be elected Monday night. The nominating committee is headed by Lewis Hill and he will be assisted by B. F. Short and John Russ. Kenneth Armstrong presided as chairman at the two initial meetings and M. G. Hubbs was chosen temporary secretary. In addition to a president, other officers will be: a vice president, secretary, treasurer and one member of the board of directors. These are provided for in by-laws which were discussed at Monday's meeting and will be offered for adoption, with amendments at the coming meeting Monday night.

Hereafter there will be one meeting monthly. Those present Monday were given papers on which to list their doubtful customers. These names will be presented Monday night and rated. The members of the association feel that some of their customers may not like being rated, but that it is self-protection for the merchant.

Monthly Meetings

At the monthly meetings lists will be exchanged as to persons who have paid accounts during the month to get off doubtful lists and new credit accounts will be listed.

This form of credit protection is

Child Escapes Death When Hit By B&O Train

Douglas Loveless, 9, was playing in the vicinity of Steuben street and the B. & O. railroad tracks Thursday afternoon and as a result has a few bruises and became a badly frightened boy.

The lad was standing along side the track as the train due here at 3:50 P. M. was backing into the station from the "Y". According to members of the train crew, the boy was standing alongside the tracks until the train approached when he became confused, got onto the tracks and started running ahead of the train. Arthur West, brakeman on the train saw Douglas and pulled the air brake on the train, but not before the first car struck Douglas knocking him to the track.

Douglas was knocked to the bed of the tracks and fortunately the depression between the rails prevented his being more severely injured. Train crewmen pulled him from beneath the train. He had a slight bruise on the back of his head. It is believed by trainmen that the lad was momentarily stunned when first hit by the train, and this prevented his head being more severely injured by being struck by a car truck. It is also fortunate he was not at the crossing when struck where there is no depression between the rails.

The lad told the brakeman he did not hear the air whistle which is usually blown at this crossing when the train is backing into the station.

Services will be conducted from now until the Rev. Johns graduates by a supply pastor, yet to be selected according to members of the committee.

A wire tapping charge may bring a probe into the Department of the Interior, headed by Ickes—fiery administration spokesman. What was supposedly a routine examination into the qualifications of an Ickes subordinate by the Senate Public Lands Com. turned into a sensational inquiry with testimony on wire-tapping and an embezzlement of $84,000 involving a dummy CCC camp.

Miss Hille Tells Presbyterian Ladies of Chinese Personalities

Missionary from the Orient speaks at home of Mrs. Maurice E. Miller — Shows How Chinese Christians have been working for uplift of their countrymen.

Miss Bessie Hille, missionary to China home on furlough, was guest speaker at the meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church held at the home of Mrs. Maurice E. Miller last Thursday afternoon. Miss Hille's address was given after the devotional service which was conducted by Mrs. Carl Sutliff. The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Charles L. Crane, acting president. Mrs. Irving R. Gladstone sang a solo.

Miss Hille said in introduction that she wished to talk about some people who stand out among the Christians she has known in China, and the work they have been doing among their own people. "But first", she said, "I would like to give you an idea of the mission schools that have been in operation in Shanghai, where my work has been for many years.

"There is the Mary Farnham School for girls which gave junior and senior high school training to 426 girls. There was the Lowrie Institution for boys, a school of about 700. Not far away was the big Russel Sage building. There was the Nantao Institute—a neighborhood house serving around 800 people daily and the Newberry Bible School for women with 70 students. Besides these there were three primary schools for 980 students and two kindergartens for 145.

"It has been hard to get land for these schools in Shanghai, those who own it just do not want to let go, for people do cling to the land in China—it is the 'good earth'. The government of late years has been very good about establishing primary schools and we had eight of these in our section of the city, all carrying on in a splendid way.

"In the early days of missionary work in China our mission schools for girls had to furnish practically everything for the students, and while money went a long ways there it was impossible to take care of many girls with the funds available. The people were loath to give up their girls to enter schools where they would be taught Christian doctrines instead of the worship of their ancestors, and only destitute families would do so. Thus in the early days only the very poor classes of girls came to us, for we had to practically pay them to do so.

"At the time of the Pieping Rebellion there came a group of homeless people who were glad to get into our school. There was a grandmother, her son and children. The grandmother became a cook in the school and her son the Rev. Tong finally became pastor of our church. His son was a young man of great gifts, a very friendly man who was educated and finally went into Y. M. C. A. work. He was successful and became superintendent of the large Y. in Shanghai. But Z. H. Tong was not satisfied that he was doing the kind of work which would make his life count for most, although he was doing his job well.

"He came to America, and while here he had a new spiritual experience. Mr. Tong want back to China and became pastor of our church, the church his father had been pastor of before him. It was rather

TWO WAYS AT ONCE

If one could imagine a train going in two opposite directions at the same time one might be able to understand the philosophy of Mr. Roosevelt's conferences with business leaders one day, and his utterances on the next relative to putting ALL holding companies out of existence in this country. For a train could not present a more amazing spectacle going in two directions at the same time than does the President talking about ending the Roosevelt depression one minute, and sending all business into jitters the next by saying no holding companies whatsoever should be allowed to exist. Nor is there any more surprising statement on record from a public man than the denouncement of plans for regulating industrial production, a few days after members of his official family have declared administration war on monopolies.

Any school child above the seventh grade should be aware that regulating industrial production by the state would be establishment of the totalitarian state, and a totalitarian state can only continue as a monopoly.

Small wonder that more and more of the sober members of the Democratic party cannot longer pay even lip service to the ideas of the President. Small wonder that the greatest majority any party ever had in Congress is now hopelessly split over the radical plans which keep unfolding from the councils of the New Dealers.

Small wonder that prominent Englishmen who were regarding our New Deal innovations with interest early in this Administration, are saying how thankful they are their own country did not follow our crooked trails of experimentation. Recently Robert Boothby, a prominent member had the following to say in the British House of Commons:

"The President promised among other things to bring about a planned recovery, to reduce unemployment, to look after the interests of the small man, to stabilize commodity prices, and to prevent violent market fluctuations. Recovery has now been checked, the volume of unemployment is rising sharply, thousands of small investors have been impoverished, there has been a steep fall in the commodity-price level, and the fluctuations of the market during the past three months . . . have been more violent than at any time since 1929. . .

"In Great Britain there is yet no sign of any real abatement or check of activity. Here the production of capital goods, based upon the combination of cheap money and confidence, remain at a high level . . . But in view of the serious recession which has unquestionably occurred in America, and the severe shocks to confidence which have been administered, it would be unwise to anticipate any sustained (world) recovery . . ."

Brendan Bracken, another leading House of Commons member of the "ginger group"—M.P.s in their middle 30s, many of whom have business interests in The City—recently visited the U. S. to judge for himself of President Roosevelt and the economic situation. Among several London newsorgans in which energetic Brendan Bracken has an interest is the Financial News. Last week none of his friends needed to be told who had written for this London paper "HOW TO CREATE A DEPRESSION — President Roosevelt's Recipe—by a Correspondent". Excerpt: "Mr. Roosevelt, like most vocal humanitarians, is a great hater . . . . Roosevelt's punitive mind is mirrored in the drastic extension of the Capital Gains Tax. . . Working men may be forgiven for thinking that Mr. Roosevelt's passion for half-baked reforms has reformed them out of their jobs . . . As a result of (the Roosevelt Administration's) crazy experiments in taxation and their policy of harrassing industry, the lights are going out in factories all over America. The direful 'No Men Wanted' signs are brought out of storage . . . If the economic royalists were responsible for the last depression, Mr. Roosevelt and his budding commisars must take the responsibility for this one . . .

"It is the New Dealers . . . who are the real menace to American prosperity . . . Until they cease to have power to run the Federal Government, confidence will not return to America . . . Congress may be incoherent, but it is not so flippant as the President and his posse of experimenting and irresponsible advisors . . . Will they dare to ring down the curtain on the President's prima donna performances which are at the root of this Crisis of Confidence? . . .

"No man's head, however big, could carry all Mr. Roosevelt thinks he knows. . . . One day an inflationist, the next a deflationist. A fixer of prices who denounces his own creations, a giver of what he calls 'the more abundant life' who orders the destruction of food while millions of his fellow-countrymen are undernourished. A great preacher of free speech who threatened the political ruin of the Senator who for the sake of principle opposed his Supreme Court 'reform'. A bitter critic of bureaucracy who has created so many bureaux that Washington cannot contain them. A stern advocate of economy who has spent more money than any President in the history of the United States. . . .

"In the light of these inconsistencies, can it be denied that 'confidence' and Mr. Roosevelt go ill together? The power to create a state of uncertainty in which no businessman or investor will incur risk is vested in the President of the United States. Mr. Roosevelt is the first President who thought fit to use that power. Every ounce of it was applied. Neither graphs, nor economic jargon, nor statistics are required to show how Mr. Roosevelt made the depression which should always bear his name. He created it by methods which were as direct as they were effective".

MISSPENT FUNDS

A Pennsylvania judge recently received a plea of guilty from a man charged with driving while intoxicated. Judge Harry Rowand inquired:

"Are you employed?"

"Yes, I work for the WPA", the confessed drunk answered. "I get $15 a week".

"I have kept track of you fellows", the judge stated. "And 85 per cent of the men charged with drunken driving brought before me are WPA workers. I cannot understand why so many of you WPA workers own automobiles and spend your money for booze."

Judge Rowand sentenced the drunk to three months in the Allegheny County workhouse, and other drunks who spend WPA money the government hands out, for booze, coming before him will likely receive jail terms. But if there were any real desire on the part of officials to straighten out the mess this country has been taken into by profligate spending, an honest effort would be exerted to stop the expenditure of taxation money for booze.

About twenty billion dollars has been spent by this Administration, priming the pump in various ways to end the depression. And while there were still some 8,000,000 unemployed—according to the Biggers census—we were hit by the Roosevelt depression which knocked things back to about the point we started from. Meanwhile the national debt has climbed to thirty-eight and a half billions, with the President admitting another billion would be piled on next year.

It is high time the government stopped paying WPA men tax funds to spend on booze. One way to accomplish that would be to return the relief problem back to local communities where reliefers could be dealt with according to their real needs. Another way would be to put all WPAers' names in the saloons, hotels and liquor stores, forbidding sale of booze to anyone on relief.

The country is still saddled with nearly three more years of Roosevelt Administration. In spite of the president's half-hearted gestures towards economy he does not intend to really cut down the bureaucracy of officeholders piled up the last five years, and with the present staggering cost of the federal government there will be no balanced budget. Mr. Roosevelt was a spendthrift Governer and he will continue to be a spendthrift President. We can expect to see at least a billion more added to the debt the coming three years, which will mean a staggering total of more than 42 billions. If the Roosevelt depression sends us further down, then the debt will climb higher.

The only hope of help in this situation lies in Congress. That is a faint hope, indeed. And in the face of bankrupting the country the WPA rolls are loaded down with men who can afford to drive automobiles and take the wheel while loaded down with booze.

CAPITAL CONSUMPTION

Outstanding characteristics of the United States government, and the country at large, is the growing tendency to live in the present and ignore tomorrow.

For nearly ten years the Federal government has spent $2 for every $1 received in revenue. Expenditures are climbing steadily.

In the name of social security, the government taxes the pay envelopes of wage earners, then immediately expends the funds thus derived for present needs of government itself—instead of holding them in trust for the future needs of the nation's workers. The future is left to shift for itself.

And then there are the heavy inheritance taxes that have become so drastic that they are gradually drying up a valuable source of government income; the same is true of the excess profits tax which destroys corporate savings, curtails needed expansion; and the capital gains tax, which again destroys rather than conserves capital.

The list of such policies could be continued indefinitely. They pervade nearly every department of government activity, crop loans, housing loans, etc. It is what the economists call "capital consumption". As the New York Times points out: "Liberal economists hold that progressive capital formation is the chief way by which the position of the great mass of the workers can be permanently improved. Capital consumption is the reverse of this process".

Capital consumption leads directly to chaos, misery for all.

"If this country is ever wrecked, it won't be . . . because the liberal spirit demanded too much reform . . . It will be because the liberal spirit showed a criminal lack of consideration for reason, deliberation and experience".

An Awkward Entanglement

By WALTER LIPPMANN

AT ANY moment the United States government may find itself in an exceedingly embarrassing position. Quite unintentionally, of course, Congress has under the recent neutrality act delegated to foreign governments the legal power to make some of the most vital decisions of American foreign policy. Thus, at the present time Japan can, if it wishes, "declare" war on China, and by that declaration compel the President to put into effect the provisions of the neutrality act.

Now, it has been the view of the President that our national interests would not be served by applying the neutrality law to the Sino-Japanese conflict. Relying on a loophole in the letter of the act, the President has, therefore, not invoked its more stringent provisions. This was a considered decision. Whether it was right or not may perhaps be debatable, though the preponderant informed opinion in this country has agreed with the President. But at least the decision was an American decision. It was made in Washington. It was made to support American interests as the government understood them.

This freedom of decision has been possible, however, only because Japan and China, each for reasons of its own, has thus far preferred to wage a savage war without a legal declaration of war. The moment one of them, again for reasons of its own, decides to make a legal declaration of war, the President of the United States is automatically placed in the position where he must either nullify an act of Congress or enforce a policy which he considers against the best interests of this country.

Surely it is both humiliating and dangerous that crucial decisions of American policy should be made not in Washington, but in Tokio, should be made not because we think our decisions wise, but because the Japanese think them useful. It is, to understate the matter very considerably, rather annoying that the Japanese should be in a position to make up our minds for us.

Obviously, it was never the intention of Congress to delegate to any foreign power so essential a part of American sovereignty. The theory of the neutrality act, like that of the recently defeated Ludlow resolution, is that nobody, not even the government chosen by the American people, is to be trusted with the conduct of foreign policy. The sponsors of these laws have been searching for devices which would prevent war by preventing the government or its citizens from doing anything that might conceivably bring them into conflict with a foreign power. But in their eagerness to keep the American government and its citizens out of mischief, the authors of these laws have forgotten that while they have the power to prevent Americans from acting, they have no power to prevent foreigners from acting.

And so, having deprived the President of a vital part of his constitutional power to conduct foreign affairs, we find ourselves in the preposterous position where we are waiting patiently to find out what the secret Japanese imperial conference sitting in the palace at Tokio may have decided that our relations with China are henceforth to be.

Few who had a hand in writing the neutrality act anticipated any such curious practical result. As a matter of fact, the neutrality act was written by men who were thinking not about the Pacific and the Far East but about Europe and the Atlantic Ocean. They were thinking, too, not about the probabilities of a future war, but about the supposed lessons of the World War. They were legislating, as some one has said quite aptly, to prevent the United States from being entangled in the war of 1917.

But in fact they have brought about some of the most awkward entanglements imaginable. Starting from the premise that the United States must remain isolated and free of all foreign connections, the law in fact delegates to the imperial government in Tokio the decision of what our policy shall be in respect to the Chinese war.

This is not the way to protect our interests and to preserve our own peace in the world as it is today. If we are to maintain our independence of action, accepting no commitments under the League covenant or other treaties of collective security, then in the name of common sense let us disentangle ourselves from a law which commits us to take a course contrary to our interests whenever the Japanese government chooses to "declare" war. Granted that we do not want our foreign policy made in Geneva, we certainly do not want it made in Tokio, Berlin, Rome, Moscow, or Nanking.

There is much, perhaps everything at this time, to be said for keeping our hands free. Then let us keep them free.

The Hope of the World

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman Sentinels of the Republic

A prominent feature of world news during recent years has been the growing truculence, in voice and action, of the Fascist and Communist nations.

On many spots of our globe these twin enemies of democracy are disturbing the peace of the world.

For whose benefit? Their own peoples? That's what the dictators proclaim... but the facts belie their statements. To the average man and woman such strife has brought only hardship.

For those under arms it has meant wounds and death. For those at home it has meant the discomfort and belt-tightening that inevitably accompany war. To all it has brought conditions where reduced wages or compulsory labor, privation by edict, conviction without trial, and many of the other evils of tyranny are commonplace.

Yet through every available source the people now under totalitarian government are told that this relinquishment of human rights is for their benefit. By every means they are told that existence in chains is preferable to the free life of democracies. By every means they are told that such surrender of their freedom to worship as they choose, or to speak or write as they choose, or to exercise a voice in government, is to their advantage.

Unfortunately many men, once free, now accept these claims. Unfortunately some smaller nations within the shadow of the great dictatorships appear willing to listen, too. But the people of America and the other great democracies realize their falsity.

They know that when the people govern, wages are higher, and will buy more; the human spirit is freer, and will achieve more; peace is more certain and will prevail longer.

They know that democracy assures not only the greatest security, but the greatest well-being, for the average man and woman.

They know that democracy remains the hope of the world.

And so long as the democratic peoples remember these things, so long as they check false claims against actual evidence, neither the persuasions nor the sword rattlings of the dictator nations will prevail against them.

Bases or the Lack of Confidence

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE persistent attempt on the part of the Government to present the opposition to today's tendencies as emanating from a handful of greedy rich men representing entrenched privilege will fail. The President's speech on Saturday is another such attempt. Again, the "Head of the Nation" asserts his intention "to work with all his might and main to restore and uphold the integrity of the morals of democracy"—against a small minority group who seek to reassert their power.

In passing, this column cannot resist pointing out that under the American system, there is no such thing as the "Head of the Nation." The President of the United States is not the "Head of the Nation." The Constitution does not provide for prasidium government. On the contrary, sovereignty and authority are carefully divided between the states and the Federal government, and between the various branches of the Federal government itself, and the very conception of the "Head of the Nation" is what Jefferson denounced when he said: "an elective despotism is not what we fought for."

If the issue in this country were really what the President says it is: the People vs. a minority of recalcitrant Economic Royalists, there would be no serious opposition whatever to the New Deal—and certainly not in this column. There would not be that serious lack of confidence which the President takes so lightly, forgetting apparently that confidence is a prime necessity of democracy, and that the Union was founded—again to quote The Federalist—"as the proper antidote for the disease of faction" and for "that repose and confidence in the minds of the people, which are among the chief blessings of civil society."

Far from even starting the elimination of the proletariat, which must be the object of genuine democracy, it is nationalizing and institutionalizing their distress and meeting the unemployment problem by the withdrawal of millions of our people from productive enterprise, segregating them into what threatens to become a permanent sub-standard class, politically manipulated.

Far from bringing about the decentralization of wealth—although this is the latest rallying cry of the Administration—its only program for achieving this desirable end is to centralize everything under the control of the Federal government, with the promise to decentralize it later.

Far from meeting the problems of technological unemployment in a constructive fashion, it has put into operation taxation policies which definitely accelerate the process.

Far from encouraging and releasing fresh energies and new enterprise, through which alone the national income can radically be augmented, it has adopted policies which have already tended to freeze production at past levels and now to shrink it, to hold ownership where it has been, to burden the whole wealth-creation process with a huge load of public debt, and a large non-productive class of inspector-bureaucrats, so that the burden of maintaining and increasing the goods and services which, produced and consumed, are the national income, fall on fewer and fewer shoulders.

The enormous growth of a class parasite on the government, plus professional job-holders having a vested interest in the perpetuation of the policies by which they live, create a pressure group of unprecedented power, which government manipulates but cannot control.

The attempt to create a balance between agriculture and industry by a minute control of agricultural production, acre by acre, leads to quota systems which become value-determining factors, stifling enterprise and passing the control from responsible ownership to irresponsible government bureaucrats, opening the gates for the law evasions which we knew under prohibition, and to nation-wide political corruption permeating the grass roots.

The possibility of extended minute control over industry, placing the destiny of multitudinous and ever-dynamic activities into the hands of inexperienced, inefficient and irresponsible people, who suffer no personal losses by their mistakes and win no personal gains by their successes, will again divorce control from responsibility for consequences.

This does not mean that those of us who find ourselves in the opposition—and there are millions of us who have no financial interests at stake—deny the realities of the times in which we live, or the demands for a better social order. We simply do not see the better social order emerging through this system.

And we believe that the struggle, which has been artificially augmented, can only be resolved in a way more harmonious with our native temper, tradition, and goal.

We do not believe that it can be resolved along the lines of European social democracies—out of which the present European despotisms have logically grown—and which were, and are, permeated by a Hegelian conception of the state.

And these are the bases of the lack of confidence.

The Dairy Herd Restocks Itself

Dairy cows depreciate or "wear out" the same as farm machinery; and why not? inquires Karl Gardner of the animal husbandry department at Cornell University.

Th e cow puts out more energy every year than any other farm animal, including the horse, he says. She does it the most efficiently of all farm animals, and the farmer "has to pay for this production and efficiency in the short and productive life of the cow."

Few dairy cows ever live to see their eighth year, according to Gardner, even though a cow is just in her prime at eight years. Figures show the average cow stays in the herd only five years after her first calving.

Dairy cows are removed from herds for many reasons other than depreciation. They may be unprofitable producers, and disease, especially Bang's disease and mastitis takes a heavy toll.

Mr. Gardner urges New York dairymen to raise their own replacements for the dairy herd, because they can not afford to purchase good cattle continually. Poor producers can be bought at low prices, but good dairymen do not want them.

"The enterprising dairyman interested in improving his herd, finds that raising his own replacements helps in the control of disease. It is also usually easier to finance the raising of calves than to put out from $60 to $150 for a cow every few months."

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hayes and daughter Ellen Jaye were Sunday visitors of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Lamson.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate commu-

Doughnuts Crack

Mrs. E. B. writes: "My doughnuts frequently crack when frying. What causes this, and how can I prevent it?"

Mrs. Jessie A. Boys of the State College of Home Economics replies: "Anyone of the following may cause cracking: too much baking powder, too much flour, too much shortening in the mixture or a frying fat that is too hot.

"You may wish to try the following recipe, which was used successfully for many years by a woman who was consigning doughnuts to a woman's exchange for sale:

2 eggs
1 cup of sugar
3 tablespoons of melted butter
1 cup of sweet milk
4 cups of bread flour
1½ teaspoons of salt
4 teaspoons of baking powder
¼ teaspoon of grated nutmeg
½ teaspoon of lemon extract

"Beat the eggs well, add sugar, beating it in gradually, then add the melted butter and the extract. Mix and sift the dry ingredients and add them gradually, alternating with the milk. More flour may be needed, depending on how dry it is, but the dough should be kept as soft as it can be handled. Pat the dough with the floured hands or press it very lightly with a rolling pin (pressure makes the dough less tender and delicate) and cut it into shape with a floured cutter.

Fry the doughnuts in fat that is from 360 to 370 degrees Fahrenheit. If a thermometer is not available, use the bread test as follows: drop a 1-inch cube of bread into the hot fat and remove it after 60 seconds; if it is a golden brown, the fat is right for frying doughnuts, which require about two minutes in the fat."

Mr. Rader brought samples of glass products in the course of manufacture and the finished product. Glass wool and its more than 300 uses were described and samples distributed to those present. The speaker answered questions at the close of his talk. Games were played at the close of the talk.

Alfalfa is probably the oldest known plant cultivated as food for domestic animals.

Music Topic of A H S Assembly Program Fri.

"The Amateur Turns a Critical Ear on Music", was the topic of a short informal talk given by Harold Beeston of Homer, before the students of the Addison High School Friday morning. He supplemented his talk by several well chosen and well presented selections to illustrate the criticisms he was making. Mr. Beeston has appeared in concerts here on previous occasions and his winning personality and splendid voice won instant approval from the students and adults who heard the program.

The regular assembly program opened with a short talk by Miss Lucy Beers, president of the Commutors' Club. New regulations for governing the students during the noon hour are being enforced by the students themselves. The new rules provide that the library shall be for study only and not a social center during the noon hour, that a student monitor will be in charge of and responsible for the conduct in the auditorium during the noon hour when students are permitted to dance to the radio and Victrola, that room 14, the commercial room, may be used for a game room and students will be permitted to bring ping pong, checkers, bingo or other games.

Coach William Miller spoke on the lack of cooperation in attending basketball games to cheer for the team. He stated that a winning team did not need support as much as a losing team and asked that more students turn out for games.

Mr. Gladstone then presented Mr. Beeston, who spoke in part as follows: "We must learn to recognize the wearing qualities of good music. A Beethoven sonata brings peace to the troubled soul. It is smooth and rhythmic. Modern jazz is jumpy, cacophonic and written for the moment."

He then presented three groups of songs with Mr. Darby as his accompanist. The first group consisted of 'Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love Away", an old Surrey love song, "Mavourneen" an Irish love song and the group closed with an old Negro spiritual "Lord I Want to Be More Loving".

In introducing the second part, Mr. Beeston stated that songs of laughter live because most people want to laugh and if they laugh enough they will remember the songs. Songs by Harry Lauder were then presented in Scotch costume, complete to the crooked stick. The first was "Roamin' in th' Gloamin'" followed by "Beautiful Sunday" and "She Is the Lass for Me".

Mr. Darby gave a piano solo during the costume changes. The first was "Saguidilla" by Baum and the second was "Dusk and the Shadows". The third group included the well-known and tender "Coming Home" and was followed by "Song of the Sea". This concluded the formal program. Mr. Beeston then responded to three encores presenting humorous selections, particular appealing to a junior audience", April Fool" "Song of the Rooster" and by request "Shortnin' Bread".

Knights Will Play Dundee Here Friday

Addison High School will play Dundee here Friday night in the first home league game of the season. Special attention of the basket ball fans is called to the fact that this will be played in the Old True Gymnasium owing to the Advertising Club meeting being held in the high school Friday night. The squad has been improving gradually during the past few games and should give a good account Friday night. Tuesday's game with CFA has been canceled owing to regents week.

The team lost its two games during the past week, since publication, when Hammondsport defeated them at Hammondsport 24 to 21 in one of the best games of the season for the knights. This game marked the return of Thomson to the lineup. Some tough breaks in the pinches cost the locals the game. Throughout the entire contest it was a debatable question as to which team would emerge victor.

The team lost at Bath Tuesday night also by a score of 40 to 22.

Addison Naval Officer Discovers Pacific Murder Yacht Aafje

Lt. Charles G. Robertson, serving in San Pedro, discovers ship on which murderer held sway for five days — Naval officer received appointment while living in Addison—Grandson of D. M. Darrin.

The weirdest story to come out of the Pacific Ocean in many a year and a tale to equal any Robert Louis Stevenson or Conrad tale, concerned the yacht "Aafje" when a mad man ruled with gun for three days.

And the discovery of the crippled yacht after two murders had been committed and the bodies tossed overboard, the survivors helpless, hungry and in a state of near collapse was brought about by Lieutenant Charles G. Robertson, son of Mrs. Helen Darrin Robertson, a resident of this village. And Lt. Robertson secured his appointment to Annapolis while a resident of Addison.

The Atlanta Constitution, well known Georgia newspaper, takes credit for Atlanta being the home of Lt. Robertson, where he now makes his home. A recent item in the Constitution relative to the rescue of the Aafje murder yacht is given and herewith presented in detail owing to the local interest in Lt. Robertson, grandson of Attorney D. M. Darrin of Addison.

"Gripping details of how an Atlanta youth led rescuers to the ill-fated death yacht Aafje, from which an amazing story of piracy and murder on the shark-infested waters off the west coast of Mexico came a week ago, were learned yesterday by The Constitution from the mother of the young rescuer.

"The story of the Aafje is one of the strangest tales that ever drifted in from the high seas. It is an epic of a placid holiday cruise commenced in San Pedro, Cal., December 20 and culminating four days later in a murderous mutiny.

"But the 'behind-the-scenes' rescue story, related by Mrs. Helen Darrin Robertson, mother of the young Atlanta naval flyer, is an episide overlooked in the excitement resulting from the stories of the six survivors—three pretty women, two men and an eight-year-old boy.

"The Atlanta youth who sighted the yacht drifting aimlessly in the Pacific is Charles G. Robertson, junior grade lieutenant, United States Navy, San Diego.

"Details of the rescue came to light in a letter from Robertson to his mother, whom he had visited December 20. Press dispatches and newspaper headlines which heralded the rescue to the nation referred to him only as a "naval flyer". But here's the story of the rescue as Robertson's letter to his mother tells it:

"'Last Wednesday (December 29)

State Agriculture Report Shows Farmers Fared Poorly

Sales of New York State farm products, in 1937, amounted to more than during 1936 or during any recent year, but increased costs took a larger percentage of the sales value than for some time, according to a state-federal report released from the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

The growing season for New York State crops is normally short and when it gets a late start, as it did in the spring of 1937, many of the crops have to develop rapidly in order to mature before the first killing frost arrives in autumn.

Cold weather and frequent rains made the preparation of the soil in the early spring almost impossible. The result was that practically all of the spring grain and several of the crops normally planted in the early summer went in late. Continued wet weather over much of the state caused many of these plants to root very shallow so that when dry weather finally came, the plants suffered and light yields were obtained in many instances. The winter grains, pastures and meadows made good progress and generally gave good production, although much of the hay and grain was harvested with difficulty. Much of the hay became overripe before it could be harvested, a considerable amount was ruined in the field, and much of the wheat became sprouted before it could be put under cover.

Pasture conditions remained high throughout the season over most of the state, and this caused milk production per cow to remain at a high level until late summer.

Through the early part of the year the scarcity of grains and other products available for dairy feeds made the feed high in price, but with the coming of abundant pasture and the decline in fed prices, as the feed became more abundant with the advance of the season, the cost of feeding the dairy cow declined.

High feed and low egg prices, early in 1937, discouraged many of the poultry and egg producers to such an extent that more than the usual number of flocks were closely culled of non-producers, and a smaller than usual number of chicks were hatched. While the production of eggs per flock has remained high on account of favorable weather conditions, the number of hens and pullets per flock on hand at the end of the year was less than for some time. The price of eggs is below that of a year ago, but the decline in the feed prices has placed the poultryman in a relatively better position than for some time.

Production of most fruits was the highest for several years and, in general, the quality has been good. The prices of many of the fruits have been low so that the incomes of fruit growers have been low. Large amounts of apples in various parts of the state were allowed to waste, since no paying market could be obtained for them.

Potato production was fairly high, heavy yields on Long Island, and on the mucklands, upstate, offsetting the very light yields on many farms in other sections. In competition with several of the other late potato states where a good production has been obtained, the price per unit has been low and many potato producers have had small incomes.

The production of field beans has been above average in this state as well as in the majority of the other dry bean production states, with low prices the rule.

Through the truck crop sections of the state conditions have been very variable. Late types of cabbage have been in good demand and have brought good prices per ton, but the yields have generally been light so that the income per acre has not been large. Late cauliflower gave a good production and with good prices obtained, a great many cauliflower producers have done well, but the cauliflower areas are very limited in extent.

The onions in many of the more important onion areas of New York grew well until late summer when they were severely injured by unfavorable weather and diseases. This combination caused the growth to stop with a large percentage of small onions. Many of the small onions did not keep well so the shrinkage has been heavy. Only the better quality onions were stored so that the most of those in storage at the present time are of good quality and desirable in size. Recent prices have been better than early in the season, but with many of the onions still in storage, it is impossible to determine the outcome of the season's deal.

The canning factory crops were generally in good production, except where they were injured by the floods.

Cash farm income or the estimated amount which New York farmers have received from the sale of crops, livestock and livestock products, is placed at $310,450,000, for the calendar year 1937, compared with $299,600,000. From these amounts, however, must be deducted the cost of production, such as hired labor, purchased feed, fertilizer, farm equipment, supplies, etc., before the net income can be obtained.

Considering all types of farming in all sections of the state, the farmers have generally fared poorly so far as net incomes are concerned. Production of most crops has been high, but at the same time competing states have had good production and this has tended to lower the prices for New York State products. Farm labor has continued to become scarcer and higher in cost. With the lowering of the price of the products which the farmers have to sell, combined with higher labor and feed costs during much of the year, the net income of a large proportion of New York State farmers has declined from that of a year ago when the production was much lighter.

Certified Seed Potatoes

While the 1937 production of certified seed potatoes was the highest on record in the United States, amounting to 15,395,390 bushels compared with 11,111,397 bushels in 1936 and 12,064,107 bushels in 1935, in New York it amounted to 431,100 bushels compared with 387,729 bushels in 1936; 415,300 bushels in 1935; 544,000 bushels in 1934 and 520,000 bushels in 1933.

The 1937 production (8,519,901 bushels) in Maine is the largest on record for that state. It constitutes 55 per cent of the total production of certified seed potatoes in the United States. Nearly 85 per cent of the 1937 production in Main consisted of Green Mountain and Cobbler.

Of all the varieties certified in the United States, Cobbler, constituting 37 per cent of the total, led all others. It was followed by Green Mountain with 26.2 per cent, Triumph with 15 per cent and the new variety, Chippewa, with 4 percent.

Winter Wheat

The sowing of winter wheat in the fall of 1937, amounting to 305,000 acres in New York was reduced from the area sown in 1936, due in part at least to the extremely dry weather in the early fall which made preparation of the soil very difficult. Sowings in recent autumns were as follows: 1936—351,000 acres; 1935—283,000 acres; 5-year average 1927-1931—239,000 acres. The growing condition of 83 per cent on December 1, 1937 compares with 90 in 1936 and the 10-year average of 88. The United States acreage of 57,492,000 acres sown this fall compares with 57,612,000 acres sown a year ago, and the 5-year average of 45,290,000 acres. The condition of the crop on December 1, at 76 per cent, was below average. The extent of abandonment on account of winter-killing is always a factor in the outturn of the crop.

Pig Crop

About 146,000 pigs were saved in the fall of 1937, compared to 192,000 in the spring of 1937, and 163,000 in the fall of 1936, on farms in New York, according to a survey made in cooperation with the rural carriers.

Short Weight For The Motorist!

NEWS ITEM: Governor Lehman's new budget makes New York state motorists pay $97,850,000 in gasoline taxes and license fees during the next fiscal year; but only $33,283,000, or 34 per cent, will be used for roads. Motorists are planning to combat re-enactment of at least one of the two 1 cent emergency gasoline taxes, which expire June 30th. Under present tax rates, a motorist must work nearly two weeks to pay just his automobile taxes.

CHAPTER CHATTER

Many requests have been made of the Agricultural Department concerning the ailments of poultry in this community. This year seems to be an especially bad year as far as mortality of laying birds is concerned. This department has had six calls within the past month and has found evidence of range paralysis, tuberculosis, tumors and slipped tendons. Often it is impossible to tell the exact cause of death even with a post-mortem examination. In any case where there is any doubt as to the cause of death, speciments are sent to the Veterinary College at Cornell where poultry disease experts make an accurate diagnosis of the case. Anyone having similar trouble with poultry can avail himself of this service.

Don't forget the dairy convention in the Addison High School next Monday and Tuesday from 10 to 3 o'clock. State and national speakers will appear on the program. Entertainment will be provided, dinner will be served by the seniors Come and hear the speakers and discuss the dairy question with your neighbor.

Harold Wheaton whose father was recently injured while working in the wood-lot, has had to quit school so as to work at home. This department hopes that Mr. Wheaton will have a speedy recovery so that Harold can continue this year's school work.

The price of milk is lower now than during the months of low production. The Bargaining Agency has been forced to lower the price of milk twice within the past few months due to an increasing supply, lower New York city prices and fighting and bitterness among farmers of the different sections of the milk shed.

From now until July 1 will be a difficult test for the newly formed agency and if it can survive these trying months it will go a long way toward being successful in the future.

Home-Sickness Creates Poem On the Canisteo

Home sickness has often created some of the great poetry and songs through the years. And it was home-sickness which caused the Canisteo River to be eulogized in poetry when a home-sick son wrote of the river.

Fred P. Miller, who lived in Addison about 30 years ago was a minstrel man. And as many minstrel men have done, he traveled far from home and friends. And while thinking of them and this vicinity he wrote the poem, "The Dear Old Canisteo". It was never set to music but was used to the tune of "In the Evening by the Moonlight.

THE DEAR OLD CANISTEO

In good old York state flows a stream
'Tis loved by old and young,
Its winding path and shady banks,
Where folks have honest fun,
They gather there at evening,
Hearts light and cheeks aglow,
And tales of love are often told,
On the dear old Canisteo.

Chorus:
The boys and girls in harmony
Sing songs of sweet simplicity,
Soft and low; while they row,
'Neath the moonlight's silver glow.
How the old folks would enjoy it
As they linger on the shore
And hear the songs sung on
The dear old Canisteo.

When I am away I wonder
If they ever think of me,
The ones I love and the dear old place
Each night in dreams I see.
And through the day I'm longing
For the time that I'm to go
Back to my home and friends once more
And the dear old Canisteo.
Chorus:
The boys and girls in harmony
Sing songs of sweet simplicity,
Soft and low; while they row,
'Neath the moonlight's silver glow.
How the old folks would enjoy it
As they linger on the shore
And hear the songs sung on
The dear old Canisteo.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

Editor's Note: Every week in this paper, Leo Bolley, famous sports expert and radio commentator on WFBL and WGY, will discuss sports from the angle of an Up-State fan.

THE old Stove League is in session now and it's time to swap a few baseball yarns while the sport is hibernating for the Winter.

Don't stop us if you've heard this one—for it's a favorite of ours. We mean the one about the unfortunate umpire who was working in a Southern game to decide the bitter rivalry between two Negro teams.

The umpire, a little old mild-mannered darky, was in a most uncomfortable spot. No matter what decision he made there was a riot of objection every time. Came the ninth inning with the score tied up. The home team was at bat. Two men were on the sacks and there was one out.

The manager of the home team sent in a pinch hitter, a huge broad-shouldered individual with a reputation for being very sensitive on matters affecting his personal interests. This pinch hitter strode to the plate, banged his bat on it several times and cast a glowering look on the umpire who crouched behind the catcher.

"Call 'em and call 'em right, lil' squirt," he growled, "else six of yore friends'll be wearing w'ite gloves 'bout dis time day after tomorrow."

The pitcher wound up and sped the ball across. It was perfect, waist-high and right over the center of the plate.

"Strike one!" yelled the umpire.

While the batter was turning his head to glower at the umpire, the pitcher shot another one across. Another perfect one.

"Two!" cried the umpire.

The big darky dropped his bat, fixed his brawny hands on the throat of the umpire and squeezed hard. There was murder in his eyes.

"Two whut?" he demanded.

"Too high fur a strike!" quavered the umpire with magnificent presence of mind. "Yas, suh, entirely too high fur a strike."

The intercollegiate and interscholastic outboard racing championship regatta has been assigned to New York again, with the ninth annual event recently scheduled to be held at Lake Ostego at Cooperstown late in June. The first intercollegiate regatta was held in 1930 at Lake Skaneateles under the auspices of the Colgate University Outing Club.

We're glad to note the growing tendency on the part of college athletic associations to recognize outboard racing as an intercollegiate sport and put it on the same basis as other activities.

You might not see the world, but you would see plenty of New York if you were one of the State's game protectors. The Conservation Department estimates that during the past year the 161 men on the staff traveled an average of 22,308 miles, or a total of 3,591,588 miles, the equivalent of circling the globe nearly 145 times. And that's TTraveling with two capital "t's."

This Week In Sports

By the Grandstander

Carl Hubbell is the first of the Giant players to return his signed contract to the 42nd Street office of the New York Nationals. It is believed his new contract calls for $22,000 for the coming season. Carl won 22 games last season.

—o—

Fritz Crisler, Princeton football coach, has been approached unofficially to take the coaching job at Michigan vacated through the forced resignation of Harry Kipke. Chrisler likes Princeton, however, and may remain there. In five seasons there his team has won 34, lost 10 and tied five. This gives him a batting average of .750 which is not bad.

—o—

Don Budge, America's singles tennis champion, is having hard going in Australia. He has dropped four of the past five matches to Jack Bromwich. He had an attack of flu to make matters worse for him and had to quit Saturday.

—o—

Van Lingle Mungo, fiery storm pitcher for the Flatbush Dodgers, has not been traded by Brooklyn, contrary to reports in circulation last week. He wants the Brooklynites to play ball behind him and he will give them all he has during the coming season.

—o—

Guy Comfort of Perry had a pretty good solution to the Colgate fiasco during the past season. In his column last week he stated the lads were rather disgruntled because Kerr had to rush off to a broadcast or a newspaper office to write after each game and did not return with them, as they felt he should. In other words they felt Kerr is commercializing his football too much for their good, for they want him with them.

—o—

This writer received another laugh from the antics of the United States Lawn Tennis Association meeting in Florida last week. This body is usually good for several laughs for their "protection of the amateur status of players" in financial matters. They have now issued a ruling that no lump sums will be given amateurs for expenses, as accurate expense accounts must be kept to prevent the amateur from "making a profit" as they say. This tennis business is one of the biggest rackets in amateur sports and somebody is going to house-clean there and upset some apple carts for the lordly rulers.

—o—

Tommy Farr, otherwise known as Thomas George Paul Farr, will be matched to fight James Walter Braddock, Jersey heavyweight in another "battle of the century" in Madison Square Garden Friday night. From this long distance view, which will be about as near as some fans get in the balcony, it looks as though the Tonypandy miner will severely wallop the WPA foreman. The winner will be matched to meet Maxie Baer March 11. Both have defeated Der Max.

—o—

It looks like tough going for the Detroit Tigers again this year without the playing of Mickey Cochrane. The able catcher and field general was injured last season.

—o—

A suggestion has been made that the goal posts in football be eliminated and the electric eye be substituted as an infallible reporter of whether the ball went over or not. This will take some of the kick out of the game in my humble estimation.

The Addison Merchants are playing bang-up ball in their league and should win top honors in second place. Great games are anticipated on the old True gym floor during the next month or so.

—o—

The high school basketball squad is finding the going rather difficult this season. This is Coach Miller's first season in scholastic basketball. Lack of material has handicapped the squad and sickness has also crippled some of the members. However, the Coach is anticipating winning a reasonable share of the balance of the games to give the squad some standing in the league.

—o—

A football coaching school is to be held in Cornell June 27 to July 2 under the direction of Carl Snavely.

—o—

And speaking of Cornell, there should be one of the best football teams in the collegiate east next season. They should go to town on the entire seven game schedule.

—o—

Many small communities throughout New York and Pennsylvania are capitalizing on the vicinity hills and snow storms to entice city youths and maidens to their vicinity for winter sports. Some have erected ski trails and slides, skating rinks, toboggan slides and coasting places. And the railroads and bus lines cooperate by bringing the city dwellers to the village at excursion rates. Nearby Pennsylvania places have capitalized on that with great financial returns and great fun.

—o—

"Cy" Young, who retired as pitcher from the major leagues in 1911 after establishing a record of 511 victories, will come out of retirement February 27 to coach embryonic pitchers at Ray Doan's school in Hot Springs, Ark. Lon Werneke and Urban Faber will assist.

—o—

Sports writers of Philadelphia will honor Connie Mack at a dinner January 25 in the Penn Athletic Club. All American league managers will be on hand except Oscar Vitt, who is in California. Joe McCarthy will come from Buffalo, Mickey Cochrane of Detroit, Bucky Harris of Washington, Gabby Street of the St. Louis Browns, Joe Cronin will come from South Carolina and in addition Carl Hubbell, Joe Di Maggio and many others will attend.

Aggie Seconds Defeat Cameron Town Team

The Addison Aggies reserves pulled a big surprise when they defeat-the Cameron town team last Friday by a 19-10 score.

The Cameron boys, although much larger, found the handicap of no practice and the new type of game too much for them. Allen of the town team played most of the game with the Aggies.

Hay Shakers Lost to Robins Thurs. Night

Finnerty's Hay Shakers lost to Robbins' Round Robins Thursday night in the preliminary to the Merchants-House of David game. The youngsters ran, jumped and yelled their way up and down the court to show what prospects there are for basketball material in the grades in high school. And the victory evens a score between Coach Finnerty and Coach Robbins and all is even now. Mike Triches gets credit for coaching the losers. Ricker proved the scoring ace of both squads with seven points to his credit.

Elkland Leads Merchants By One-Point Margin

The Elkland basketeers in the New York-Penn League pulled a fast one on the Addison Merchants on the home court Monday night. In a last second foul shot Horton put the Elklandites ahead by one point to win 39 to 38. The game see-sawed throughout with seldom more than two points separating the winners from the losers. Inability to make good on mid-court shots plus a little over-confidence cost the locals the game. Every man on the floor scored.

LET'S PLAY A GAME

MUSICAL GAMES always please grown-ups and children alike. Try these:

MUSICAL BOTTLES - Get eight pop bottles, identical in shape and size, one fo reach note in the scale. These are filled with varying quantities of water; test them till each produces the desired tone. Performers hold the bottles and blow from the edge of each to make the notes. A conductor stands out in front and indicates which person shall blow his bottle. Choose simple melodies like "Home Sweet Home" or "America."

MUSICAL JUGS - Vinegar jugs will produce sounds in the same fashion. Their notes are much richer and lower in pitch.

MUSICAL GLASSES - Water glasses identical in shape and size and filled to different heights with water will produce different notes. They should be struck with a hardwood stick.

MUSICAL HIDE AND SEEK—Hide some object where the finder can not see it. Now have him search for it, guiding him by singing softly when he is far from it and louder as he nears it. This same thing can be done by guiding a person to perform some act such as "take the clothes pin off the line" or "pick up the book."

Addison Aggies Win From Savona High

The Addison Aggies narrowly escaped having their first defeat pinned on them at Savona last Thursday night by the Savona Aggies, but they managed to eke out a 13 to 10 win.

The Addison boys had defeated the Savona Aggies earlier in the season and considered the game a set-up but the home boys almost upset the apple cart by a last minute rally that netted them ten points.

The locals led at half time by an 8-0 score and at the three-quarters was 11-0. However the Savona lads got going and nearly pulled the game out of the fire by scoring all their points in the last quarter.

I don't profess to know much about cattle or animals but it has come to my attention that some farmers in the vicinity are feeding cattle just straw. Yet in the spring they will expect healthy milk producing cattle. It would seem to me that good feeding is just as essential in the winter months as during the summer.

The importance some people attach to social position many times amuses me. I appreciate the fact it satisfies them and makes them happy so I should not complain. The women are accused of being the worst offenders as social climbers, but we men must take our share of the responsibility.

—o—

I'm reminded of one woman in town who called many of her friends objecting to a second woman she did not like and asking that number two be kept from parties to which she, number one, was invited. Oh, me!

The youthfulness of these United States is emphatically brought home to us on many occasions. I can remember reading in history of the impeachment of Andrew Johnson and a man came into the office this week with a ticket to his impeachment which brings the whole from something abstract into a real event.

—o—

In a week or two I'll know what my credit rting is among the merchants of Addison for after this Addison Merchants Credit Association gets to functioning they will have a list of everyone in the village who has done any credit business and a rating will be given on the promptness of the payment of their bills. Guess I better go down and pay that coal bill, and let me think, do I owe anyone else? I hope I'm not numbered among the chiselers

I wonder how many married couples are just drifting along, accepting each other at face value without knowing what is down deep in the hearts and souls of each other. Words are often weak in making known these feelings and expressions but couples should try to get close to each other, without outside interference as often as possible to more thoroughly appreciate the other's attitudes, hops, fears, desires and mental problems.

—o—

The above is brought about by two incidents of the past week and the principals I know will pardon me. Divorce and a remarriage are pending because two misunderstood and could not delve deep enough while the third could feel and appreciate, hence a remarriage after the divorce. In the second incident misunderstandings kept growing from no desire to hurt the other, but a lack of sitting down to talk it over. But when it was realized that a grave tragedy might stalk into the lives of the principals and drastic action was necessary, then man and wife sat down, talked it over and arose a more united couple.

Addison Aggies Defeat Troupsburg High School

The Addison Aggies hung up their fifth straight win of the season Friday night when they defeated the Troupsburg high school on the old gym floor by a 26-11 score.

Although much improved in form over the Savona game the Aggies lacked much of the snap and fight that characterized their earlier games.

P. Austin put the visitors in front with a gratis shot on the first play of the game. Matthews duplicated a moment later to tie up the game. Martin sank a cripple to give the Aggies the lead, which they maintained throughout the remainder of the contest.

The first half was evenly played with the Aggies in the lead on baskets by Clark, Martin and Johnson, while Troupsburg stayed within striking distance on goals by Austin and P. Mettler and fouls by Steadman and K. Treat.

The second half was all Addison as Johnson ran wild to score ten points. The Aggies defense tightened considerable during the second half and held the invaders to one basket.

Long who has been out of the game with a sprained ankle returned to action in this game.

A return game will be played at Troupsburg in February.

Odds and Ends of House of David Game

Almond Tuttle, Woodhull, came to the game when he heard whiskered players were on the bill of fare. And Mr. Tuttle has a well-developed beard of his own. He looked at the youngsters with their beards and asked if they were real.

And speaking of Mr. Tuttle, the visitors asked him to get into a uniform with them. This was the first game of basketball the venerable Woodhull man had seen.

Spectators were treated to some fancy shooting and also some fast floor work on the part of the visitors. Twice during thecontest they put on exhibitions. And prior to the game they were throwing long shots into the baskets without backboards, from all over the court.

A stunt never seen by this writer before in many games of professional ball, was the bounding the ball on the floor and making it go into the basket.

During one of the passing exhibitions a local player looked like an an adagio dancer on some lawn flitting about trying to stop the ball and players. His team mates watched the exhibition on realizing they could not stop it and so saved themselves a lot of energy.

The visitors were quite sociable and Bill Miller was telling me that his man told him how to make the plays, what he, Miller, was doing wrong and how to correct the errors. Other players had like experiences with their men.

The game was clean but the visitors know the little tricks which keep the game clean but yet slow up an opposing player. Referee Grange could not see everything and even if he looked right at them he could not see the trick steps to slow up a local man and throw him off his stride nor could he see the split second touch on the back giving added impetus to a runner to throw him off nor the hand in the belt a split second to likewise throw a runner off stride.

And another thing about the House of David players, they talked all the time. This is a good suggestion for the locals, to talk so much that an Addison voice in a game gets an instantaneous response while an opponent's voice will mean nothing. In the past many good plays have been lost because a player threw a ball to an opponent for an home team follow.

There were few fouls called in the game, only 10 altogether and eight were on the visitors.

The David fellows like to play and tried to hustle Don Grange into beginning the second half before the regulation time period was up.

The crowd appeared much pleased at the paint job on the True gym. This should attract more people to future games.

The visitors left here to drive all night to New York where they played Friday night, Saturday afternoon and night and Sunday afternoon and night. No wonder they are good with all that playing each week.

More than 400 events are slated for C ornell's 31st annual Farm and Home Week at Ithaca, February 14 to 19.

Addison Merchants Score 39 Points Against Fast House of David Five

One of best road basketball teams played here Thursday night before packed crowd in True Gymnasium—Score 53 to 39—Visitors gave several demonstrations of fast passing.

Grandstander

Basketball fans received a double treat here Thursday night when the Addison Merchants brought one of the best road attractions to this village to play. The nationally known House of David team, representing the Benton Harbor, Mich., House of David has one of the best traveling teams. playing basketball. In addition to their winning personalities, members of the squad are so highly trained that a basketball is second nature to them.

This treat in addition to the marked improvement in the playing of the Merchants surprised many of the fans present Thursday in the True gymnasium. Through their playing Thursday night the Merchants have developed a larger following in basketball and should have good attendance at contests to be played here during the coming months.

As was to be expected the visitors won the game. The score really does not matter, but to the statistically-minded the score ended 53 to 39. The reason the score does not matter is due to the fact that the visitors might have scored many more points had they desired, but twice during the contest they put on passing exhibitions which won applause from the local fans as well as praise from the Addison players. When it is considered that the House of David players make their living playing basketball and are playing nightly and three or four times each week-end, the showing of the Merchants was not too bad, not in the scoring but in the passing and the ability to break up plays. Scoring did not matter in this game as has been said before. Some Addison players secured valuable advice from the visitors who told them how to make many plays.

The David players opened and within the first minute of play had scored six points on long set shots. Incidentally the winners tried very few under the basket shots, preferring to take long shots from the center or side of the court, most of which were made good. When under the basket shots were made they came from the well known sleeper play.

Hargrave opened the Addison scoring and managed to account for 16 points for Addison while other squad members were being held scoreless. The score at the close of the first period was 12 to 8 and at the half was 30 to 12. The third period ended with the visitors on the long end of a 40 to 22 score.

The game was marked by clean playing on the part of both teams with only 10 fouls being called. Many tricks that might have been called fouls were used by the visitors, familiar with the tricks of the game but no unnecessary roughness or bunching was noticed.

Cronin, lank center, scored 18 points from the field and Shean, bulky captain of the visitors, scored 14, mostly from center court.

The House of David players came here through a cancellation of games in other communities and proved to be one of the best attractions in the community in the past two seasons and in addition, despite their cut on the proceeds, the Merchants were enabled to get out of debt and have a little reserve for future games.

Merchants Win From St. Mary's

The Addison Merchants outplayed the Cadets of St. Mary's Corning in a fast basketball game played here Saturday night. Robbins with 21 points and Grange with 14 were the pacemakers for Addison while the scoring attack for the visitors was led by Ainsworth and Cronin with six field goals each.

Addison took the lead over the Flannery coached Cadets in the opening period and were never overcome at any time during the game, although in the third period the losers drew within three points of Addison until Grange dropped three mid-court shots. The score at half time was 23 to 14.

Film Sleuths Break Backstage Murder Mystery

Inspector Oscar Piper, the cocky, cigar-chewing police detective and Hildegarde Withers, his inquisitive schoolmarm assistant, return to the screen to track down another murderer in their usual hilarious fashion in "Forty Naughty Girls", at theAvon Theatre Tursday and Friday.

James Gleason again portrays the Inspector's role, as in the five preceding pictures of the series, and ZaSu Pitts, who played Hildegarde in "The Plot Thickens", once more turns to the task of correcting Gleason's errors.

films, the new RKO Radio offering packs its swift action into the space of a few hours, its thrills and comedy occurring on one event ful evening in a theatre setting. While a performance of a successful revue is going on, the show's press agent is found murdered in the ingenue's dressing room, and Oscar and Hildegarde, in the audience, hasten to solve the mystery.

Before they can apprehend the killer, another murder is committed in full view of the audience, and the search waxes fast and furious, with practically all the members of the company and the chorus of dancing beauties suspected. Thanks to Hildegarde and her intuitions, the killer is finally apprehended, with the newly-developed "nitrate test" clinching the proof of guilt.

As in former pictures of the series there is a juvenile romantic interest in this case with Marjorie Lord, Broadway beauty, and George Shelley as the two youngsters whose affairs are tangled up in the killing. Joan Woodbury as the star of the revue, Edward Marr as the ill-fated press agent, Frank M. Thomas as a property man, Alan Edwards as the show's producer and Alden Chase as its author-leading man, as well as Tom Kennedy as Gleason's blundering aide, all contribute to the excitement and laughs of the offering.

Addison Naval Officer Discovers Murder Yacht

I had a very interesting and unusual experience. While patroling about 8 a. m., we sighted a small auxiliary (sails and power) yacht.

"'Upon flying close by to look at her, we saw that a crude 'S.O.S.' was painted on a sail. We were 150 miles off shore.

"'I decided to land and investigate. It was a bit rough, but not too bad Shortly after, one of the crew came over to the plane in a dinghy and told his amazing tale—and was he relieved! No fuel—torn sails—very little food and water—and all that emotional violence!

"'I radioed a summary of his story and the coast guard, which was in the vicinity, started for my reported position. As the sea was somewhat rough for a take-off, I had to dump several hundred gallons of gas and I decided to await the arrival of the coast guard cutter so she could stand by as a guard in case anything happened on the take-off.

"'About five hours later she arrived and I was able to take off'.

"And that's the story of the rescue of the yacht's survivors. Robertson, who graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1933, found the party whose stories recalled the days of Captain Kidd and resemble the stark fiction of Joseph Conrad and Herman Melville.

Planned Paradise Isle

"The Aafje's tale was the story of a swashbuckling sailor who pirated the yacht, murdered its owner, and sailed for the South Seas, where he apparently planned to found a "Paradise Isle" with himself as master.

"The modern 'Blackbeard' was Jack Morgan, who claimed to be descended from the pirate, Henry Morgan, and under whose name was recorded a long criminal record, federal agents said.

"Morgan chartered the yacht from its wealthy owner, Dwight Faulding, Santa Barbara hotel owner and sportsman, and set sail — presumably on a two-day cruise around Catalina island.

"Faulding was invited to go along as skipper.

"What followed was the murder of Faulding and four days of terror for the three women and the men and boy.

The women were Mrs. Lillian Morgan, 17-year-old New Orleans, La., girl, who ran away with the adventurer; Miss Elsie Berdan, a nurse, carried on the trip to attend Mrs. Morgan; Mrs. Gertrude Turner and her eight-year-old son; Robert Horne, photographer friend of Faulding, and George Sternack, a guest.

For five days they were at the mercy of Morgan, who paraded the decks with two guns in his belt, pirate fashion, bullied the women and attempted to assault the nurse.

"On Christmas Eve, Horne slipped out of his cabin. Catching Morgan off guard, he hit him over the head with a marlin spike. Federal agents said the survivors were calm and almost automatic in their report of how Morgan's body was dumped into the shark-infested waters.

"At the point of a gun, Morgan had forced Horne and Sternack to heave Faulding's body overboard after he and Morgan had a pistol fight at the helm of the yacht, federal men were told.

"After disposing of Morgan, the yacht drifted aimlessly until December 29, when Robertson sighted the sea-swept craft — sails torn and decks strewn with debris of a mild ocean storm.

"Once during the four days while Morgan ruled the ship, a navy plane circled overhead and Morgan threatened to shoot the flyer if the others should signal him to land, the survivors said.

"Federal agents learned that Morgan was half-crazed, had often expressed wild determination to "seize" a ship and sail for the south seas to set up a colony.

"Murder charges were filed against Horne and Sternack by federal agents, who charged Morgan's death was caused by drowning, but they were absolved and freed."

strange, the church was vacant at the time, someone was filling the pulpit and his people were delighted that this young man should be willing to become their pastor. He has been using a tremendous influence over his people.

"It has been criticized that our mission work now has more to do with the wealthier Chinese people. It is true, for with the number we are trying to reach there simply is not enough money to educate many who are unable to pay some tuition costs. But out of that group which could not pay their way in the old days comes a descendant, this young man, Mr. Tong, who has received an education and is now able to work among his own people. This young man comes back and is able to give fifty per cent—yes, almost 100 per cent return on the mony invested.

"I have received word that our church still stands, although other buildings all around were burned. Japanese soldiers have been there and the Bible was found torn in two, but our church was miraculously left. Mr. Tong has been chosen chairman of the Christian Relief Association which is doing a wonderful piece of work among the refugees. Right there on the field is a native Chinese able to carry on this sorely needed work among his stricken countrymen.

"Years ago there was a little Chinese boy found by a missionary. He was sick and the missionary said, 'this boy is too weak to be put into our boys school—he needs great care and nursing'. The boy's family were willing to part with their son, he was so weak they knew they could not raise him. He grew up and graduated from the Mary Farnham School and at first he became a telegraph operator. Later Mr. Chang went into the printing business and he finally became very wealthy.

"Now the Japanese do very fine printing and they used to get all the printing business from China. But Mr. Chang founded the Commercial Press and his great plant in Shanghai began doing all this work. It made the Japanese furious towards him because Mr. Chang did all this business they formerly had and in one of the attacks they bombed the big Commercial plant. So when Mr. Chang rebuilt his business he did not build one big plant which the Japanese could destroy easily—he scattered a number of plants in the different cities of China.

Mr. Chang did not want his children to go into business. He said he had made all this money with the Commercial Press and he wanted his children to go into Christian work. When he was getting started in life Mr. Chang realized the debt he owed to the Mary Farnham School, and although he could not pay very much at first he did pay a little at a time. As he made money he was able to educate his children.

"One daughter he sent to Oberlin College in America and she has done some fine work. Another daughter has been in Nanking as an assistant to Mme. Chiang Kai Sheck. The daughter, Miss Beulah Chang, had a girls' school in Shanghai, and when the Japanese invaded the city her school was destroyed. It seemed that she just couldn't go on, but Miss Chang was determined and went to school authorities in the International Settlement. She had called together 800 of her students and her faculty and she told these authorities they could let her use the building part of the day. And through her force of character Miss Chang did persuade them to divide the building—they had it from eight in the morning until two, and she kept her school from two until six.

"Here we see again how the early work has been repaid. The Mary Farnham School had to take in this weak little boy, but the return has been great. His daughter with her indomitable will is carrying on the work of Christian teaching against almost impossible odds.

"I have had letters from Shanghai that tell of the terrible desolation. People are left with absolutely nothing. Good Christian people in China are starving to death, and nothing can be done to help them. Our pastor's old home was destroyed, but when he heard of it he said, 'That doesn't matter.'

"Our school at the south gate of the city was inadequate for the 70 girls it took care of, It was a building not any larger than this house. Yet it did a particular work with girls who had been left as young widows—blamed by their families, and girls unhappily married. A fund had been started for a new building, but it seems impossible to do anything now. Yet after this war is over there will be a far greater need for this school—there will be so many girls left widows of soldiers, who will need it. And we have been amply repaid for the work done in this school by the students who have gone out of it to work among their people.

"I have had letters about the looting of the houses that were not burned. Miss Darling wrote me my home is left but the Japanese soldiers were in it. She found an American flag I had and hung it in front but that did not keep them out. We had collected a lot of old clothes and before I left had packed these in a large box. Now the Japanese have a great dislike for our old clothes, and Miss Darling wrote they had strewn these garments all over the house, to show their displeasure. I had canned some cherries before I left and they opened some of these cans. Evidently they did not like the cherries for they emptied all the cans into the bath tub. These are not the important things of course. I just mention them in passing. This is the first time our section has been torn up by invasion.

"It is not surprising the non-Christian Japanese soldiers should loot as they go about in China. When we stop to think that our own soldiers leaving France had to have their baggage checked over to see they were not taking away the belongings of the French. No wonder the Japanese soldiers loot.

"In closing let me say again that the Christian work done in China has borne great fruit. The country was going ahead fast when this war had to come to it. These people I have told you about are some of the personalities I have known who have contributed greatly to the Christian work in China, they are the people I like to talk about".
